GIANTS DEFEAT WASHINGTON SENATORS 4-3

Gigantic Liquor Conspiracy At Sea Is Uncovered

BRITISH STEAMER TOWED INTO PORT BY THE DRY FLEET

Crew of 28 Men and 2 Women Are Taken Into Custody

INTERNATIONAL BANKERS BLAMED

Big Cargo of Liquor Is Seized By Dry Forces At New York

(Associated Press)

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—Prohibition officials claimed to have uncovered a gigantic Anglo-American rum running conspiracy with $10,000,000 involved when they towed into harbor today the twin British steamer Frederick B., with a crew of 28 men and two women under armed guard, and with $500,000 liquor cargo aboard.

Five special government agents, under leadership of William A. Walker of Washington general field superintendent of the dry forces made the capture after they had, according to Mr. Walker, dickered for the purchase of 25,000 cases of whiskey from the vessel's master, paying $100,000 in currency and checks for the contraband.

Bankers in this country, England and Canada were concerned in the conspiracy, Walker said.

The Frederick B., of 1960 tons, was seized 15 miles off Monmouth beach yesterday after an investigation of three months.

She was brought into harbor under a heavy guard. Coast guard officials who made the seizure, under Walker's instructions said details of the international plot would be made known after the prisoners had been taken before the United States district attorney.

The federal operatives said they were convinced the Frederick B. was one of four rum ships operated by a band of international rum smuggling conspirators.

Three other ships of the "rum line," they said, had landed between 50,000 and 100,000 cases of whiskey and other liquors in the United States the past seven months. The vessel's seizure, beyond the 12 mile limit, provided for in the special treaty between the United States and England, was made designedly, the agents said. They insist the ship was within an hour's sail of the shore. They will seek a court interpretation of the treaty, permitting the seizure of rum ships within an off-shore area of the estimated distance the captured ship can sail in an hour.

MORE TERRITORY MAY BE INCLUDED BY CITY OF ALBANY

Petition Presented To Council By Moulton Heights Citizens

OFFICIALS GO IN MONDAY EVENING

New Administration To Take Oath of Office On Earlier Date

A petition signed by about 50 citizens living in the Moulton Heights community, west from the city limits of Albany was presented to the Albany city council at the final meeting of the present council, and it was referred to Aldermen Maxwell, Chunn and Norwood. Those men are to be members of the newly elected city council which takes office next week. It is expected they will make their report on the petition to the new council.

It was set forth that the people just out of Albany to the west, from Decatur line north of them as far west as 20th avenue, and as far south as Austinville, desired the privileges and advantages offered by the city. Especial stress was laid by the spokesmen who presented the petition on the superior educational advantages they hoped to secure by becoming a part of the city of Albany.

Law Books Conflict

It was shown at the council meeting that the city code designated the first Tuesday in October as the day the newly elected Mayor and council of Albany should take office, but that the state law said the first Monday was the time for the new government to assume control. It was finally decided to install the new officials on Monday evening at 7:30 o'clock and T. E. Williams, notary public, was asked to swear them in.

Property On Sale

The property of the Alabama Traction company was ordered sold under the law, for a street assessment said to be due from the company to the city, amounting to around $50,000. Following a statement read explaining special trips made by City Attorney Melvin Hutson; and special work, Mr. Hutson was allowed the sum of $500 in addition to his regular salary. Citizens on East Gordon making no protest, the cost of the new cement walks laid by C. E. Malone was assessed against their property. It was stated that each lot 50 across its front is assessed about $38 for the work.

One of the last acts of the council was to instruct Clerk Henry Hartung to notify all recently elected officials of the city that they will be installed Monday evening, October 6.

By the side of a wrecked automobile the body of Earnest Wynn and J. B. Kinsaul, in an unconscious condition were discovered by persons in a passing car. The accident occurred between Defuniack and Ponce de Leon. It is believed the youths, members of the high school team, met with ill luck sometime, probably hours before the accident was discovered.

Kinsaul had not regained consciousness this morning.

TRAINING SCHOOL IS BROUGHT TO CLOSE; DIPLOMAS GRANTED

Several Addresses Are Delivered As Term Comes To End

LESSONS PROVE VERY BENEFICIAL

Thanks Expressed To Those Who Helped Toward Success

The Standard Training school for Sunday school teachers, which began Sunday afternoon at the Central Methodist church terminated last night with a few addresses, following the awarding of diplomas by Dr. W. M. McDonald, chairman of the educational committee of the North Alabama conference of the Methodist Episcopal church and the director of the school.

Many expressions were made as to the success of the teachers and students getting great advantages from the lessons. One of the most significant statements was by Dr. W. G. Henry, a professor in Emory University at Atlanta who taught a large class in "The Principles of Religious Teaching." Dr. Henry stated that the class he taught took the highest averages of any class he had ever instructed on the subjects taught. There was hearty cheering by the other classes and the visitors following the statement.

All Get Together

After the second recitation period had closed last night, Dr. McDonald announced that all would assemble in the auditorium of the church when announcement was made of the number who had graduated. It was explained that some members of the class, who had taken the course, but who were absent at one of the meetings of the school, would be given diplomas through the Nashville office of the Sunday school board of the Methodist Episcopal church South.

Dr. W. P. McGlawn, who had taken one of the courses, spoke as the presiding elder of the Decatur district, expressing thanks to all who had aided in making the school a success. Dr. McDonald, Dr. Hunter and the four teachers spoke of the pleasure and benefit they had derived from their work during the week.

The Daily was thanked for the publicity given the school.

Two Beautiful Stories

At the earnest request of many, Dr. W. G. Henry and Dr. S. T. Slaton told two beautiful stories, illustrating the enlarged vision teachers should get, and the attitude and place of teachers of Sunday school students. Dr. Henry said that teachers were like the tug boat pilots at New York harbor who launched the great ocean going ships that were to sail to their "haven under the hill" and the teachers were reminded that they were upon a full sea of opportunity and "must take the tide or lose their ventures."

Dr. Slaton's story was one that swept the entire United States from the foothills of the Blue Ridge to the tops of the Rock Mountains and on to the Pacific ocean. Dr. Slaton said an Indian chieftain sent braves to the west. Some returned with trophies, each trophy showing where each brave had been. Some had reached the peaks this side the Mississippi, others brought products from the great plains, others brought moss and lichens from the snow crowned summits of Pike's Peak, etc., and all the returning braves were applauded. Then an empty handed Indian, who seemed to meet with disaster, said that he had no trophy, but that he had stood on high in the far west to the Pacific ocean and got a "great vision." The moral of Dr. Slaton's story was:

Capital's Dream Of Title Classic Has 'Come True'

President Hurls First Ball as 35,000 Frenzied Fans Pull For Walter Johnson and Manager Bucky Harris To Lead Team To Victory.

Score by Innings:

GIANTS	010 100 000 002—4
SENATORS	000 001 001 001—3

(Associated Press)

GRIFFITH STADIUM, Washington Oct. 4.—A world's series in the national capital, a dream of baseball fandom, came true this afternoon when the Washington Senators, newly crowned champions of the American league, clashed with the New York Giants, four times successive winners of the national league, in the first canto of the annual October baseball classic.

With President Coolidge throwing out the first ball and some 35,000 persons cheering the home folks, all Washington seemed tilted on its official ear. Even the shadow of the Giants' bribery scandal was all but forgotten when Walter Johnson swung into action on the hurling hill.

The day was ideal for the game. An insistent sun overcame a stubborn morning fog and when the first Washington player popped his head out of the dug-out an Indian summer sun was glazing brightly on the green playing field.

"Just the day for Walter Johnson," said Roger Peckinpaugh, Washington shortstop and "enough heat to get his old wing working right. I've seen the Giants before. A fine team, of course, but we have beaten other good clubs all year. Why not the Giants?" John McGraw, manager of the Giants kept his pitching selection for the day under cover, but his players figured it would be either McQuillan or Nehf.

McGraw said it was a pleasure to see Walter Johnson in a world's series, but that his club did not fear the Kansas agriculturist.

With every reserve seat sold, the bulk of the crowd came slowly to the ball yard. The unreserved stand was thrown open at nine o'clock and within 20 minutes was jammed to capacity and the gate closed.

A long line of fans waited to obtain seats of advantage in the aisles, behind the reserve seats in the grandstand.

Other fans draped themselves in mass on the roofs of houses that overlooked the centerfield fence.

The early comers marked off the time, discussing the Senator's chances and listening to the inevitable brass band, piping tunes melodiously and otherwise. The diamond and out gardens were in perfect condition and lighting fast.

The crowd got its first real kick of the day when buffon Nick Altrock with a trick hat, and Al Schacht, led the band across the playing field and did their latest comedy turns.

The Washington's put on a long batting practice with Martina serving up the offerings. There was a lusty howl when Goose Goslin drove one over the scoreboard and into an adjoining street.

Walter Johnson came in for a hand when he took his turn in front of the batting cage. Johnson received a tremendous ovation.

"I'm feeling fine," declared the speed king, "and ready to pitch the game of my life, because I know that everybody is pulling for me."

Johnson's wife and mother were in a box just behind the Senator's dug-out. The big pitcher seemed to bear slightly the heavy responsibility that is his this afternoon. He seemed just like an enthusiastic boy as he faced the greatest moment of his career.

Manager Bucky Harris, a peppery figure in the Senator's preliminary practice announced his championship lineup would be intact.

Wright, Best, Couch and Hodson are working hard for places in the lineup and it is likely that they will be called upon for service.

A DAILY PRAYER.—We pray Thee for that rest when thought of Thee may hold our spirits silent and enraptured with a holy wonder.

The way to success is along the by-paths of life, as well as along Main street.

It may be stated without fear of successful contradiction that John W. Davis will carry Alabama.

The weather man is apt to be mean anytime—but he reaches the heights of meanness mountain when he predicts rain for circus day.

If Mars had made his close approach to earth, when the world was turned loose upon the world, he would have been in shame.

If baseball should get into politics, there is one consolation, we can take straw votes as to who will win.

Perhaps it was not the 53 billions, that balked the Fatherland people in paying the war indemnity—but the fact that the payment of an indemnity indicates they lost the war.

CAMPAIGN FUND HOLD-UP

A serious charge is intimated by the Civil Service Reform League at Washington in its announcement that it will investigate charges that the Republican party is "violating the letter and spirit of the law in soliciting campaign contributions from government workers." The practice of shaking down Federal employes for enforced contributions to campaign funds is not only a violation of the laws, but it is also a miserable imposition on the victims of such hold-up methods. The fact that the league is investigating the charges is evidence that they consider that there is something to them; in fact, their decision to check up on the charges was not reached until complaints had reached them from Federal employes in many parts of the country.

The specific charge is made that Willie B. Dye, chairman of the Ways and Means Committee of the Republican state organization in Indiana, has been sending out letters calling for uniform contributions of $50 from the government workers; and copies of his letters are said to be in possession of the league. The news story from Washington makes the significant prediction that "indictment of prominent Republican officials" may be expected.

Such means of raising campaigns have not been unknown in the past. In fact, the systematic extortion of contributions from petty job holders who could ill afford to pay such tribute to the political machine grew to such proportions and came to be so open and raw in its processes that the present law was enacted providing a penalty of a fine up to $5,000 and imprisonment up to three years for any solicitation of funds for political purpose from government employes. It is a just law and one which should be enforced—no matter how prominent may be the Republican officials who are practicing this particularly objectionable form of graft.—Nashville Tennessean.

GOVERNMENT BY MAJORITY IS NOW THREATENED BY ABSENTEE VOTERS

A very determined effort, which appears to be strictly non-partisan, is being made to get the American people who have the right to vote to exercise that right in the election this fall. The non-voting element among American voters is showing a steady increase. It is a dangerous sign. It shows that people are failing to take interest in public affairs, that too many will grasp the slightest excuse to keep away from the polls and that elections already are being determined by minorities that are active while majorities are apathetic.

In the 1920 presidential election more than twenty-five millions of people who were entitled to vote neglected to do so. The election that year was decided by a minority of the voters, which is against the American principles that the majority shall rule. In 1920 only 27,000,000 people voted, so that nearly one-half of the voting strength of the nation did not take part in the election. The result might have been very different if that absent 25,000,000 had voted.

The situation has reached the serious stage. More is at stake in this year's election than the question of candidates. Government by majority is at stake. For the first time in many years, and due to the threat of a heavy absentee element, there is fear this year that the selection of a president may be thrown into congress through the failure of the electoral college to make a choice. With the full vote taking part in the election, both major parties would make a better showing and the chance of Democratic success would be greatly increased, for apathetic voters are found among Democrats quite as much as among Republicans, even more so in some states that might be classed as "doubtful."

Whether or not the United States is to continue as a government by the majority, or decay into government by minority, will be determined by the approaching presidential election.

There is nothing partisan about the movement to "Get Out the Vote." It is quite separate from how they should vote. The goal is to preserve America as a government by majority rule.—Aniston Star.

A TRAIN OF THOUGHTS

For the Sabbath and Other Days

By J. E. Blair

Granted our souls are inhabited by our souls—must fall and be folded away forever. And granted that after death "creation shall broaden on man's view"—will not great tasks be expected of us after we have rested a while "under the shade of the trees?" We will say "yes." What next—we must think that it is much truer to say—"I can do what I will," than it is to say: "I will if I can." For the last quotation is close akin to the ridiculous doctrine of Clarence Darrow, to the effect that "Man does as he must." (Accept that idea as true, and God is made unjust; and as not knowing what He was about when He made man a free agent.) Granted we "can if we will." What next? Just this old saying—"Our wills are ours to make them Thine." No good or wise course is open except to do the will of our Maker. But how may we know God's will is asked? Find where His will has been expressed! Every Christian knows that God's will concerning us, is expressed in Jesus Christ. But also, God's will was once expressed in a mother quail. That mother sat tight over her baby quails, despite the clatter of an oncoming mowing machine. She sat tight until the sharp knives of the machine cut her head away. Faithful unto death. That is what the quail was. God asks no more of us. He that is faithful unto death shall receive a crown of everlasting life! No, this idea of not being able to know God's will, is all false. His will is much easier found than how "to please the boss." Try this dog story: In the olden times a traveler carried a great treasure in his saddle bags. One hot day, after feeding his horse and sleeping a little, the man and his pet dog set out to complete their journey. After a while suddenly the dog came along side and began to bark and to snap at the feet of his master. The dog continued to bark and to bite with ever increasing earnestness, until thinking the animal had rabies, the master shot him dead. As he turned in his saddle, the man missed his treasure bags. His mind worked. He knew that the dog had been faithful unto death. Poor little dog. In his day and generation that dog had been as faithful as God wants any living being to be—including ourselves, whom we consider the crowning glory of creation—"created a little lower than the angels." Are any foolish enough to believe they are doing God's will who do less than that treasure saving dog? The man went back where he had slept and recovered the precious gold, but ah, at what a cost! It is idle, absolutely idle to discuss whether blood or death or any thing that may happen out side of our own souls can save. The question is, the supreme issue for every one of us is: Will we will, by God's help to be as faithful in our day and generation as was the mother quail and as was the traveler's dog?

recently constituted Fine Arts Commission, which argues against the erection of a new bridge over the Thames opposite St. Paul's on the ground that the great cathedral already is threatened by heavy motor traffic, which is constantly increasing and that any further shaking may lead to a catastrophe.

The defenders of the cathedral argue two ways. Either the new bridge would carry little traffic and so would be unnecessary, or it would carry a great deal in which case the constant vibration would endanger Wren's masterpiece, everywhere recognized as one of the finest buildings in the world.

Fears for the safety of St. Paul's first were entertained when the subways were run through the earth in close proximity to the foundations. The vibration was recognized as a menace. This menace has been steadily augmented by the constant increase in surface motor traffic which rolls past the church, and in very close proximity to it.

Finally the arguments of the Fine Arts Commission against a new bridge and increased traffic are supplemented by a warning from Mervyn Macartney, surveyor of the cathedral. He argues that underground work for the structures of the proposed bridge would threaten the foundations of St. Paul's by tending to drain off the water under the "pot earth" on which the cathedral stands.

Californians Forced to Adopt

Primitive Methods for Hunting
LOS ANGELES.—Southern California hunters are facing the prospect of reverting to primitive methods of killing deer this season, as the result of a Los Angeles county emergency ordinance, adopted to prevent forest fires, which prohibits the discharge of firearms in areas outside of incorporated cities. Other counties are considering similar legislation.

Some hunters have announced their intention of using bow and arrow while others favor bowie knives or boomerangs.

Was Man's Work Many Years LONDON—Tom Tuthill who worked for 36 years in a London match factory striking matches to test their quality, died recently from blood poisoning contracted while at work. His job, one of the queerest in King George's kingdom was created for him after he had suffered from infantile paralysis and needed an easy task.

All day long, day after day, year after year, Tuthill went on with his work, scratching all his matches by hand and passing judgment upon the quality of each fresh consignment from the workrooms. Some years ago he became eligible for a pension from his company but he liked his work and could not give it up.

LONDON SHOPS ENDEAVORING TO POPULARIZE DERBY HATS

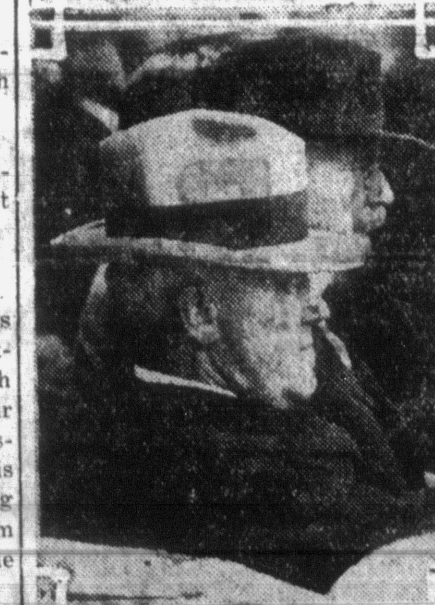

LONDON—There is a quiet revolution going on in England in the world of men's fashions its outward and visible sign just now being the restoration of the bowler hat, as Piccadilly calls the Derby to the place of honor it held in pre-war days.

Up until recently there was a gradual falling off of formality in men's dress, due to the influence of the war. Now the reaction has set in in favor of formal dress. The first indication was the gradual replacement of the soft collar by the old fashioned stiff linen collar. Next the soft shirt for evening wear, which few Britons ever approved disappeared, its place being taken exclusively by the more dignified stiff front.

Now comes the complete change in hat fashions. Last year a Derby hat was the exception, but this year it has become the rule. One latter attributed the change to the predilection of the Prince of Wales to the Derby. At any rate in Bond street and Piccadilly, more than twice the number of Derbies are being sold in comparison with Trilbys and Homburgs.

You have to pay a good salesman a neat salary. Do you consider newspaper advertising a salesman? Then make out a monthly appropriation for newspaper advertising and watch the sales grow.

Nominees Put Worry Aside

When John W. Davis, Democratic Presidential candidate, and his running mate, Governor Charles W. Bryan of Nebraska, were in Omaha, Neb., together, they forgot politics long enough to journey to the baseball park and watch a game. Their expressions plainly show their interest.

Countess Salm von Hoogstraeten, the former Millicent Rogers, heiress to the $40,000,000 estate of her father, Colonel H. H. Rogers, of New York who created a sensation when she eloped with the impecunious Austrian nobleman and motion picture actor, has given birth to a baby boy in New York. The Count, from whom her father separated her, is in Europe, and it is said there will be no reconciliation. Secretary of State Charles Evans Hughes will take charge of the political campaign of Theodore Roosevelt, Republican nominee for Governor of New York State. This picture of George R. Christian is being used by the New York City police in a nation-wide search for the absconding member of the Stock Exchange firm of Day & Heaton, who is alleged to have disappeared with $2,500,000 of the firm's money, causing its failure. Federal Courts having ruled that an adopted child of an American citizen cannot share exemption under the immigration quota, Ellis Island Immigration Station, New York City, have deported the sixteen-year-old son of Mrs. Adeline Rolla, Countess von Hoogstraeten, who was born in the country. New York Letter

by Lucy Jeanne Price

NEW YORK—There is such a thing as too great sophistication in theatrical circles. It's all right and maybe somewhat impressive to refuse to applaud a production or to look blankly bored throughout an evening. But it can be carried too far. Algernon Grievous tried to live up to his dressy name by going soundly to sleep at the performance at the Winter Garden. Now, it is bad enough for anybody to do that, but this particular sleeper was from New Jersey, and for a commuter to take his revue in that blasé fashion was too much for the management to endure. Consequently Mr. Grievous landed at the police station. It is true that he was charged with having slumbered so loudly that he disturbed the more interested members of the audience and that he punched the usher in the jaw when he was reproved. But whatever the technical misdemeanor was, the crowning sin was in going to sleep at all. We can all of us understand that, Grievous says, however, that he had paid for the seat and if he chose to use it to sleep in he had the privilege.

We have reached the point of having cups offered for champion crossword solvers, with all sorts of prizes for the runnersup in championship contests. And now comes Mrs. Edith M. Stern, wife of the present holder of the championship, and suggests that crossword puzzles are the best known antidote to divorce possibilities. Everybody needs help in working them, she points out, and what could knit husband and wife closer and deepen their affection more than to discover that one could supply the necessary six-letter word for "well-cooked," for instance?

The most enthusiastically anticipated opening of the theatrical season to date has undoubtedly been that of "Hassan," the spectacular romance of ancient Bagdad, produced at the Knickerbocker Theater by A. L. Erlanger. It is an amazingly beautiful and colorful spectacle, the story of Hassan a confectioner in the lane of Arabian Nights, who goes forth to seek Samarkand and it told by a poet staged by an artist and sprinkled with most alluring ballets. Mary Nash, as Yasmin, the engaging temptress, James Dale as the slim, humorous and inclement Caliph and Randal Ayrton as Hassan are the outstanding members of the cast, so far as the story goes, but they must admit Violet Kemble-Cooper and her exquisite beauty into their group so far as the high lights of the evening are concerned.

After all, why go to Bagdad for adventure. With a little imagination New York does quite as well. O. Henry had that thought some time before my expression of it, and wrote "Bagdad-on-the-Subway," for our delight. But Nicholas Salla and Tony Pananese aged 9 years apiece, have tried it out. They know. And all at the cost of one thin dime. Tired of their restricted life in the heart of Manhattan's little Italy they started forth to see New York quite on their own. For six hours they travelled. They were attracted to the subway by the fact that they had heard of the Prince of Wales ride in that most American institution, and anyway they had gathered that it gave the longest rides. At last, they were found there asleep and eventually restored to their homes. "We didn't see much of New York," Tony explained, "because you can't from the subway. But we had lots of fun riding up and down. And we got acquainted with an awful lot of people."

PRAGUE'S UNIQUE MUSEUM DEVOTED ONLY TO BUTTONS

PRAGUE—"Button, button, who's got the button?" They know in Prague where buttons are to be found, for there is a button museum in the Czech oslovak capital in which every form and type of button ever manufactured or wrought by hand is on exhibit. The button museum is one of the most unique institutions of its kind in the world.

The museum was founded by a button manufacturer named Henry Waldes. Within a few years the institution has so expanded that it fills two floors of a large house in the suburb of Wrschowitz.

A study of the materials used is in itself most worth while. There are buttons of gold, silver, ivory, bronze, porcelain, of precious stones such as turquoise, opal, carnel, etc. Some buttons date back 3,000 years before Christ. The flashiest and showiest buttons are those of the eighteenth century when Europe seemed to enjoy rare luxury.

The most gruesome buttons are the so-called poison buttons, containing a tiny phial of poison and surmounted by a sharp stud. In the days of political assassinations it was an easy thing for a man attending a high society function, such as a ball, to approach his adversary and, in a crowd, to brush by him in such a way that the button scratched his skin. Into this rent in the skin the contents of the button would then flow, with fatal consequences.

Sir Oliver Tressilian is betrothed to Rosamund Godolphin, but the marriage is opposed by Rosamund's brother, Peter, and her guardian, Sir John Killigrew. When Oliver's young half-brother, Lionel, kills Peter in a quarrel suspicion falls on Oliver. A trail of blood is found leading from the body to his doorway. Even Rosamund believes him guilty. Desiring to protect Lionel, Oliver can only protest his innocence; but he obtains from the justices a document, to be produced in case of trial, attesting to the fact that he bears no mark of recent wound; that therefore the trail of blood, obviously that of the mur-derer, is not his. A few weeks later trial threatens; and Lionel, crazed with fear that Oliver will reveal the truth, hires a pirate sea captain, Jasper Leigh, to abduct him and sell him as a galley-slave.
With Oliver's disappearance it is assumed he has fled to escape trial.
His ship, the Swallow, is along the coast of Portugal when Leigh orders his prisoner brought before him. He offers for a price to take Oliver back to England.

CHAPTER VIII (Continued)Sir Oliver looked at him and smiled grimly."Now what a rogue are you that can keep faith with none!" he cried. "First you take money to carry me off; and then you bid me pay you to carry me back again.""Ye wrong me, sir, I vow ye do!
I can keep faith when honest men employ me, and ye should know it.
Sir Oliver. But who keeps faith with rogues is a fool—and that I am not, as ye should also know. I ha' done this thing that a rogue might be revealed to you and thwarted, as well as that I might make some little profit out of this ship o' mine.
I am frank with ye, Sir Oliver. I ha' had some two hundred pound in money and trinkets from your brother. Give me the like and—"But now of a sudden Sir Oliver's listlessness was all dispelled. It fell from him like a cloak, and he sat forward, wide awake and with some show of anger even."How do you say?" he cried, on a sharp, high note.The captain stared at him, his pipe neglected."I say that if so be as ye'll pay me the same sum which your brother paid me to carry you off—"My brother?" roared the knight.
"Do you say my brother?"

"I said your brother."

"Master Lionel?" the other demanded still."What other brothers have you?" quoth Master Leigh.There fell a pause and Sir Oliver look straight before him, his head sunken a little between his shoulders."Let me understand," he said at length. "Do you say that my brother Lionel paid you money to carry me off—in short, that my presence aboard this foul hulk of yours is due to him?""Whom else had ye suspected?
Or did ye think that I did it for my own personal diversion?""Answer me!" bellowed Sir Oliver, writhing in his bonds."I ha' answered you more than once already. Still, I tell you once again, since ye are slow to understand it, that I was paid a matter of two hundred pound by your brother, Master Lionel Tressilian, to carry you off to Barbary and there sell you for a slave. Is that plain to you?""As plain as it is false. You lie, you dog!""Softly, softly!" quoth Master Leigh good-humoredly.

"I say you lie!"

Master Leigh considered him a moment."Sets the wind so!" said he at length, and without another word he rose and went to a sea-chest ranged against the wooden wall of the cabin.He opened it and took thence a leather bag. From this he produced a handful of jewels. He thrust them under Sir Oliver's nose."Haply," said he, "ye'll be acquainted with some of them. They was given me to make up the sum since your brother had not the whole two hundred pound in coin.
Take a look at them."Sir Oliver recognized a ring and a long pear-shaped pearl earring that had been his brother's; he recognized a medallion that he himself had given Lionel two years ago; and so, one by one, he recognized every trinket placed before him.His head drooped to his breast, and he sat thus while like a man stunned."My God!" he groaned miserably,
"—last. 'Who then is left me!
Lionel too! Lionel!"A sob shook the great frame.
Two tears slowly trickled down that haggard face and were lost in the stubble of beard upon his chin.
"I am cursed!" he said.

Persian Cabinet Appointments

TEHERAN—The principal appointments in the new Persian cabinet, recently formed, follow: Moshar-ul-Mulk, minister of foreignNever without such evidence could he have believed this thing.
From the moment that he was beset outside the gates of Godolphin Court he had conceived it to be the work of Rosamund, and his listlessness was begotten of the thought that she could have suffered conviction of his guilt and her hatred of him to urge her to such lengths as these.This conviction had been gall and wormwood to him; it had drugged his very senses, reducing him to a listless indifference to any fate that might be reserved him. Yet it had not been so bitter a draft as this present revelation. After all, in her case there were some grounds for the hatred that had come to take the place of her erstwhile love. But in Lionel's what grounds were possible? What motives could exist for such an action as this, other than a monstrous, a loathly egotism which desired perhaps to insure that the blame for the death of Peter Godolphin should not be shifted from the shoulders that were unjustly bearing it, and the accursed desire to profit by the removal of the man who had been brother, father and all else to him?He shuddered in sheer horror. It was incredible, and yet beyond a doubt it was true. For all the love which he had showered upon Lionel, for all the sacrifices of self which he had made to shield him, this was Lionel's return. Were all the world against him he still must have believed Lionel true to him, and in that belief must have been unhindered a little. And now—His sense of loneliness, of utter desertion overwhelmed him. Then slowly of his sorrow resentment was begotten, and being begotten it grew rapidly until it filled his mind and whelmed in its turn all else."Master Leigh," said he, "what is your price to carry me home again to England?""Why, Sir Oliver," said he, "I think the price I was paid to carry you off would be a fair one. The one would wipe out t'other as it were.""You shall have twice the sum when you land me on Trefusis point again," was the instant answer.The captain's little eyes blinked and his shaggy red eyebrows came together in a frown. Here was too speedy an acquiescence. There must be guile behind it, or he knew nought of the ways of men."What mischief are ye brooding?" he sneered."Mischief, man? To you?" Sir Oliver laughed hoarsely. "God's light, knave, d'ye think I consider you in this matter, or d'ye think I've room in my mind for such petty resentments together with that other?"It was the truth. So absolute was the bitter sway of his anger against Lionel that he could give no thought to this rascally sea-man's share in the adventure."Will ye give me your word for that?""My word? Pshaw, man! I have given it already. I swear that you shall be paid the sum I've named the moment you set me ashore again in England. Is that enough for you? Then cut me these bonds, and let us make an end of my present condition.""Faith, I am glad to deal with so sensible a man! Ye take it in the proper spirit. Ye see that what I ha' done I ha' but done in the way of my calling, that I am but a tool, and that what blame there be belongs to them which hired me to this deed.""Aye, ye're but a tool—a dirty tool, whetted with gold, no more.
'Tis admitted. Cut me these bonds, a God's name! I'm weary o' being trussed like a capon."The captain drew his knife, crossed to Sir Oliver's side and slashed his bonds away without further word. Sir Oliver stood up so suddenly that he smote his head against the low ceiling of the cabin and so sat down again at once.
And in that moment from without and above there came a cry which sent the skipper to the cabin door.
He flung it open, and so let out the smoke and let in the sunshine. He passed out on to the poop-deck, and Sir Oliver—conceiving himself at liberty to do so—followed him.In the waist below a little knot of shaggy seamen were crowding to the larboard bulwarks, looking out to sea; on the fore-castle there was another similar assembly, all staring intently ahead and toward the land. They were off Cape Roca at the time, and when Captain Leigh saw by how much they had lessened their distance from shore since last he had conned the ship he swore ferociously at his mate, who had charge of the wheel.Ahead of them away on their larboard bow and in line with the mouth of the Tagus from which she had issued—and where not a doubt but she had been lying in wait for such stray craft as this—came a great tall masted ship, equipped with topgallants, running well nigh before the wind with every foot of canvas spread.

WHY GO TO CHURCH?

Should you ask me why I go to church, I would say that I go to church because it is God's House. And God is my heavenly Father and the church is His visible dwelling place in the world. There, I like to meet with Him, and talk with Him, and listen to his unuttered messages. I am His child, and he created me in His own image and likeness and I know that He will give me the things I need in my weakness and hunger. I go to church because the symbolism of the House of God conveys messages of comfort and inspiration to my soul. The symbolism of song, Scripture, sermon and supplication come to me fraught with the aroma of God's presence as sweet as the hemlock and the pines. I go to church because I need to find proper motives to stimulate my life in learning God's will in loyal worship and in expressional service for God and my fellow men."
